HORRIFYING ACCIDENT ON THE NEW YORK ELEVATED

Twelve Persons Killed and Many Others Not Expected to Live.

Car Crowded with Early Morning Workers Pitched Headlong Into the Street Below-Awful Suffering of Victims Penned in Wreckage.

New YORK, Sept. 11.—The death list of today's accident on the Ninth avenue elevated railroad, when a car crowded with early morning workers on their way downtown pitched headlong into the street, stands at the change throwing the second, third and fourth cars off the track.

The switchman, however, declares the wrecked train had Sixth avenue signals set and he expected it to slow down to take the course. Instead, it maintained the speed usual with Ninth avenue trains on the direct line.

Expected a Clear Track.

Whatever may have cause the mistake, the accident, the worst in the history of the overhead railroads in New York, came when a southbound train on the Ninth avenue line was switched off to the Sixth avenue line at the Fifty-third street junction. The motorman, expecting a clear track on the direct line of the Ninth avenue, without regarding the warning signal motorman, expecting a clear track on the direct line of the Ninth avenue, without regarding the warning signal that the switch was open, rushed his train along at a high rate of speed. The first car swung around the right angle curve, holding to the rails because of the weight of the train behind. Then the strain became too great The the strain became too great. The couplings broke, the second car was whirled about almost end for end, and, to the horror of those who looked on This Country Does Not Like Cuban from below, pitched into the street.

The first indication people on the side-walk had of the accident was a loud state department into the status of the walk had of the accident was a loud rumbling along the overhead structure. Looking up they saw a shower of sparks. Then followed splinters and the sound of splitting timbers. Suddenly the outer guard rail of the railroad structure gave way, a score of bodies were hurled through space, and with a deafening crash the car fell to the street. For an instant it stood fairly on end. Then the sides gave way as if they were made of pasteboard, beloning out a mass of humanity.

Those passengers who had not jumped from the platforms and windows before from the platforms and windows before the plunge came were thrown into a mass at the forward end of the car. As the injured men and women were struggling to free themselves the heavy train fell almost in their midst as the not be invoked by the British govern-ear itself jumped partly off the elevated ment as a basis for demanding favored structure, and was wedged against a nation treatment; such as would be enbuilding at the southeast corner of joyed by the United States in any Ninth avenue and Fifty-third street. Ninth avenue and Fifty-third street.

Work of Rescue.

Huge crowds were soon on the scene and the first work of the hastily summoned police reserves were directed to clearing a way for the rescuing of the passengers pinned down by the car. Almost every ambulance in Manhattan was summoned, and the injured and dead were hurried away with all speed.

Three alarms of fire brought many engines to the scene. A slight fire range alarms of hre brought many engines to the scene. A slight ffre caused by burning insulation was quickly extinguished, and the firement set to work chopping out the dead and injured. The task was not an easy one, for the heavy car in falling had almost completely burled pedestrisms in its wreckage. At least one was killed our right in this way, while Policeman Henry Aitkens, who was standing directly under the elevated structure, is among those most seriously injured.

Eight persons were dead when taken out of the wreck and four died later at hospitals.

Ghouls Were Present.

Before the great crowds collected by the news of the wreck could be cleared away the police were compelled to use their heavy night sticks on a number of men who were attempting to snatch jewelry or other valuables from the victims. The officers had no time to make arrests, contenting themselves with drubbing the miscreants as heavily as they could.

Coroner Scholer ordered the arrest of all those immediately concerned. Search was at once made for the motorman, Paul Kelly, who secured a position on the elevated lines six months ago. He came here from St. Louis. Kelly could not be found, and at a late hour tonight was still missing, although it was said he had spent the afternoon at the house of a friend.

Hotel Is Destroyed.

These heroic efforts were, however, without avail, and the hotel and the cottages on the west side of it were speedily enveloped in fire, it was thought then that the house occupied by Clarence Sailsburg could be saved and the attention of the volunteer firemen was given to that place.

But the terrific heat drove them back and from that on they concentrated their efforts to save the buildings across the narrow street. The large building owned by Mike Fitzgerald and occupied by Ed Buys, who conducts a saloon there, was in the greatest danger and would certainly have burned to the ground, and the entire southern part of the town with it, had it not been for the constant heroic work of Sheriff Whitehead of Eureka, who, calling about twenty brave feilows to follow him, climbed upon the already smoking structure and by constant dousing of buckets of water handed up to him, and by judicious tearing away of parts of the building which would sometimes ignite under the terrific heat, succeeded in keeping the fire from spreading.
